Remember they wouldn't ask you, if they didn't need your permission.

07.21.2006 - BALTIMORE - Allegations of sexual misconduct by a Baltimore City police officer surfaced Tuesday, as Commissioner Leonard Hamm announced an investigation against a detective from the Southeastern District.

Detective William Darryl Welch, 40, an 11-year veteran of the force, has been suspended without pay while the department investigates allegations that he engaged in sexual acts with a 16-year-old suspect during an interview.

"There is no room on the force for officers that break the law," Hamm said at a news conference Tuesday evening.

The alleged abuse occurred on Sunday in an interview room at the Southeastern District station. Hamm said the victim was arrested on suspicion of hacking by a uniformed police officer. Police later learned that she had an outstanding warrant in Baltimore County for prostitution.

"We have reason to believe the allegations are true," Hamm said.
